The figure consists of two side-by-side line graphs. Both graphs have 'Rate of reaction' on the y-axis and 'Temperature' on the x-axis. The left graph shows a curve that starts at a low rate at low temperatures and rises very steeply as temperature increases, indicating a high activation energy. The right graph shows a similar curve, but it rises more gradually with temperature, indicating a lower activation energy.

Figure 1 consists of two line graphs. The left graph shows the growth rate (log CFU/h) of E. coli as a function of temperature (°C) for a control group (open circles) and a group treated with 100 mg/kg ZnO (filled circles). The growth rate for the control group is higher than for the ZnO-treated group across the temperature range. The right graph shows the growth rate (log CFU/h) of E. coli as a function of temperature (°C) for a control group (open circles) and a group treated with 100 mg/kg ZnO (filled circles). The growth rate for the control group is higher than for the ZnO-treated group across the temperature range.
